Apple Taste Test & Graphing

How to Use:

Choose three different apples, such as one red, one green, and one yellow variety. Wash the apples and cut them into small, age-appropriate pieces. Check for food allergies or dietary restrictions before beginning.

Individual Taste Test Page:

Give each child an individual recording page. Invite children to look at, smell, and taste each apple. Help them record what they noticed and whether they liked each variety. Younger children can circle answers, color the apples, or complete the page with adult help.

Group Graph:

After everyone has completed the taste test, ask each child to choose their favorite apple. Have children place a sticker, make a mark, or attach a paper apple in the correct column on the group graph.

Count the votes together and discuss the results:

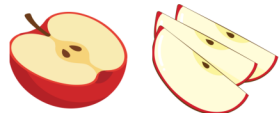

- Which apple received the most votes?
- Which apple received the fewest votes?
- Did any apples receive the same number of votes?

This activity helps preschoolers practice using their senses, describing flavors and textures, expressing preferences, counting, comparing quantities, and reading a simple graph.
